EDITOR IN DISTRESS

I hate moving. It's a pain in the ass and super stressful, but for some reason every year to year and half I pretty much decide to relocate. Sometimes it's to save money, sometimes I want to live alone and sometimes I just feel like moving. Maybe it has something to do with being an Air Force brat and moving around when I was younger. Even though I spent a lot of time boxing and moving, I did manage to go out and have some fun this past weekend.

I saw The Vibrators (UK) Thursday at Double Wide. The bass player Pete was really cool and the band played an awesome set to a handful of people.

My bros from Ohio, Midnight, played Club Dada last Friday night. It was a head banging extravaganza. I wished they could have played all night.

Sadly after those two days I was dead broke from spending around $200 on drinks, shirts and music. Debit cards bad!!

I royally screwed up and missed Richard Hunter's party at The Lodge last Wednesday. Lets just summarize it by saying I met a lady Tuesday night, drank way too much, got no sleep and prayed to god all day in the Metro ANE bathroom. Sorry Richard. Sorry Dawn.

Oh, I keep forgetting to mention that once again we have a myspace profile:
www.myspace.com/metroane.

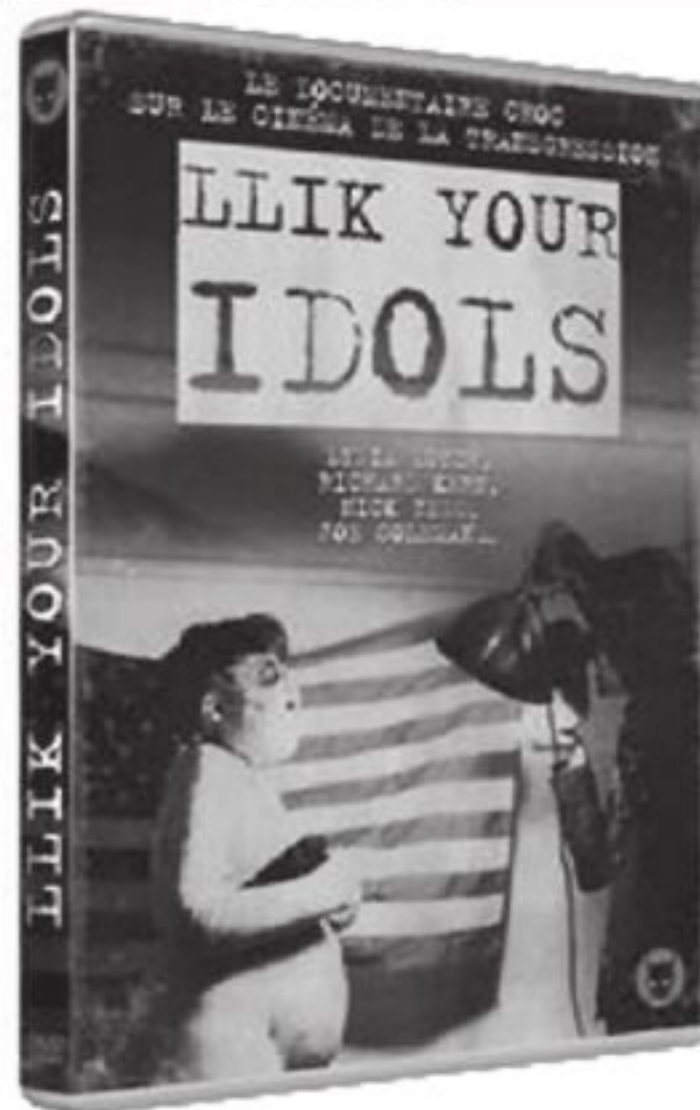

The previous one got deleted by an ex worker. I'll be in the process of adding old interviews we have done, plus a lot more pictures. Also go check out the new online version of Metro ANE. It's way easier to read and faster to download. Maybe later I'll do a Facebook, but right now I have enough work.

Since the submission due date is Monday, which was Memorial Day this week, we sadly have no articles from any of our regulars. I'm sure they will be back next week.

UFC Fans... How about Lyoto Machida destruction of Rashad Evans? Machida is going to be the champion for a while. No one can touch him in the light heavyweight division right now. He'll fight "Rampage" Jackson next, but I don't really see him causing much trouble for Machida. Looks like you can add Karate to the list of what to train in to be a well rounded mix martial artist. Like Machida shouted, "Karate is back!" Way to go.

This documentary is about the NYC underground film movement beginning in the late 1970s throughout the mid-80s. In between interviews with Richard Kern, Lydia Lunch, Nick Zedd and more are snippets of their films. Not for the squeamish, these 8mm films are rife with nudity, sex, bondage, degradation, violence, crimes. The lack of lighting and guerilla shooting style heighten the dirty New York vibe as each filmmaker other adds different elements of the twisted and sometimes drugged or drunk mind.

Director Angélique Bosio (who is 31 and thus too young to be a part of that scene at all) gets to the raw bone of "the cinema of transgression," a term from Nick Zedd, one of the profiled filmmakers. Here it is in its entirety:

"We who have violated the laws, commands and duties of the avant-garde; i.e. to bore, tranquilize and obfuscate through a fluke process dictated by practical convenience stand guilty as charged. We openly renounce and reject the entrenched academic snobbery which erected a monument to laziness known as structuralism and proceeded to lock out those filmmakers who possessed the vision to see through this charade. We refuse to take their easy approach to cinematic creativity; an approach which ruined the underground of the sixties when the scourge of the film school took over. Legitimizing every mindless manifestation of sloppy movie making undertaken by a generation of misled film students, the dreary media arts centers and geriatric cinema critics have totally ignored the exhilarating accomplishments of those in our rank - such underground invisibles as Zedd, Kern, Turner, Klemann, DeLanda, Eros and Mare, and DirectArt Ltd, a new generation of filmmakers daring to rip out of the stifling straight jackets of film theory in a direct attack on every value system known to man. We propose that all film schools be blown up and all boring films never be made again. We propose that a sense of humour is an essential element discarded by the doddering academics and further, that any film which doesn't shock isn't worth looking at. All values must be challenged. Nothing is sacred. Everything must be questioned and reassessed in order to free our minds from the faith of tradition. Intellectual growth demands that risks be taken and changes occur in political, sexual and aesthetic alignments no matter who disapproves. We propose to go beyond all limits set or prescribed by taste, morality or any other traditional value system shackling the minds of men. We pass beyond and go over boundaries of millimeters, screens and projectors to a state of expanded cinema. We violate the command and law that we bore audiences to death in rituals of circumlocution and propose to break all the taboos of our age by sinning as much as possible. There will be blood, shame, pain and ecstasy, the likes of which no one has yet imagined. None shall emerge unscathed. Since there is no afterlife, the only hell is the hell of praying, obeying laws, and debasing yourself before authority figures, the only heaven is the heaven of sin, being rebellious, having fun, fucking, learning new things and breaking as many rules as you can. This act of courage is known as transgression. We propose transformation through transgression - to convert, transfigure and transmute into a higher plane of existence in order to approach freedom in a world full of unknowing slaves."

Accompanied by the No Wave music of bands including the Butthole Surfers, Foetus, The Swans and Sonic Youth (Thurston Moore is interviewed), the total effect of the dark sides of life through the directors' eyes are manifested starkly and shockingly. If you have an interest in the avant' garde, the bizarre, the twisted or independent, underground filmmaking at all, this film is highly recommended (with emphasis on "high").-YRS4

Dear A&E Metro Magazine,

Thank you for your letter rejecting my application for employment, writing for your magazine.

I have received rejections from an unusually large number of well qualified magazines and television shows. With such a varied and promising spectrum of rejections from which to select, it is impossible for me to consider them all. After careful deliberation, then, and because a number of firms have found me more unsuitable, I regret to inform you that I am unable to accept your rejection.

Despite your company's outstanding qualifications and previous experience in rejecting writers, I find that your rejection does not meet with my requirements at this time. As a result, I will be starting employment with your firm on the first of the month.

Circumstances change and one can never know when new demands for rejection arise. Accordingly, I will keep your letter on file in case my requirements for rejection change.

Please do not regard this letter as a criticism of your qualifications in attempting to refuse me employment. I wish you the best of luck in rejecting future candidates.

Sincerely,
R. Harmon

Richard,

Once again it's Metro ANE magazine, not A&E, but since you're so persistent I'll run your so called articles which are really just annoying emails that get forwarded around and around till people like me hit delete and stop the chain.

Please stop getting drunk with OJ, stay home and get back to work with Time Magazine. They said they would promise you lap dance bucks to spend at your favorite strip club.

Girls' Night Out!

I remember the days in Texas when a vibrator had to be called a "personal massager," could in no way resemble a penis and had to be kept behind the counter.

Damn, I'm old!

Nowadays, adult stores have walls full of all varieties of vibrators from discreet lipstick-sized to massive things too scary for even me to look at, in all shapes, sizes and colors. Toys, cockrings, sport sheets, and oh, so much more...

Cindie's, located at 3610 S. Cooper, Suite 100 at The Shops on Cooper in Arlington hosts Girls' Night Out every first Monday of the month. This free event only requires an RSVP and willingness to have a great time. The ladies who attend are from all walks of life, and store manager Carrie Phelps and the store employees will give you the rundown on some of the products the store carries in between sandwiches, snacks and a little bit o' vino as well!

As a bonus, some female empowerment comes in the form of a pole dancing lesson from Karyn Pentecost, founder of The Girls' Room. Her idea of power through seduction, how to use your "business" (aka your mind and body) to get the most out of life is accompanied by short exercises and, if you like, a turn on the pole.

Raffle for adult gifts and 20% off your purchase that evening are also part of the fun. It's FREE! And, there are NO MEN ALLOWED!

Treat yourself this coming Monday, June 1st, from 7-9 pm and bring a friend or two. It's a blast! To RSVP, email cindiesarlington@yahoo.com or myspace.com/cindiesarlington or call 817-466-2300. - Colleen Morgan

Steve Earle Townes CD

Steve Earle release Townes, his highly anticipated follow up to the Grammy Award winning album Washington Square Serenade, via New West Records. The 15-song set is comprised of songs written by Earle's friend and mentor, the late singer-songwriter, Townes Van Zandt. Townes will also be available as a deluxe two-CD set, as well as double Limited Edition 180 gram vinyl.

The album was produced by Earle at his home in Greenwich Village, at Sound Emporium and Room and Board in Nashville, TN and The Nest in Hollywood, CA. The track Lungs, was produced and mixed by the Dust Brothers John King and features Tom Morello of Rage Against the Machine/The Nightwatchman on electric guitar. Earle's wife, the acclaimed singer-songwriter Allison Moorer, is featured on backing vocals on Loretta and To Live Is To Fly. Three songs cut in Nashville, White Freightliner Blues, Delta Momma Blues, and Don't Take It Too Bad feature a bluegrass band consisting of Dennis Crouch, Tim O'Brien, Darrel Scott and Shad Cobb.

The songs selected for Townes were the ones that meant the most to Earle and the ones he personally connected to (not including selections featured on previous Earle albums). Some of the selections chosen were songs that Earle has played his entire career (Pancho and Lefty, Lungs, White Freightliner Blues) and others he had to learn specifically for recording. He learned the song (Quicksilver Daydreams) of Maria directly from Van Zandt, and taught himself Marie and Rake specifically for the albums recording. Once a song he played during his live show, Earle relearned Colorado Girl in the original Open D tuning that Van Zandt played it in. Earle recorded the New York sessions solo and then added the other instruments later on in order to preserve the spirit of Van Zandt's original solo performances to the best of his recollection.

Pink Floyd - The Wall 25th Anniversary (Deluxe Edition) DVD

In celebration of the quarter-century anniversary, Columbia Records is releasing a special limited edition DVD of this landmark film. Packaged in a deluxe DVD digi-pak designed to look like The Wall with debossed brick work and a clear O-card, this stunning release features a photo montage of film shots and a fold-out reproduction of the original film promotional poster. All the artwork and design for this lavish packaging has been coordinated by original Pink Floyd designers Peter Curzon and Storm Thorger-son. Includes: 1. Original film presented in high-definition widescreen and mixed in 5.1 surround sound, 2. "The Other Side Of The Wall" - a 25 minute documentary about the making of the film and 3. "Retrospective" - an exclusive 45 minute retrospective documentary of interviews with Roger Waters, Alan Parker, Gerald Scarfe, Peter Biziou, Alan Marshall and James Guthrie 4. Original film trailer and production stills.

What's Going On In The Muzic World?

T.I. Packs Show Before Trip To Prison

Grammy-winning rapper T.I. told fans he would stay optimistic when he heads to prison on a federal weapons conviction.

The 28-year-old rapper, whose real name is Clifford J. Harris Jr., performed for a packed audience Sunday night in Atlanta's Philips Arena less than two days before he is to begin serving the sentence of a year and a day.

Many in the packed crowd of about 16,000 people held up encouraging signs, like one reading "T.I. We Will Miss U!"

He must report by noon Tuesday to the Federal Correction Institution at Forrest City, Ark. He was arrested after prosecutors said he tried to buy unregistered machine guns and silencers from undercover federal agents in 2007.

During the concert, T.I. said he hoped that everyone learned from his mistakes. He brought his five children on stage, often holding one of them while he performed "No Matter What" — a single off the almost double-platinum album "Paper Trail."

Sorry For My 'Colorful' Critique, Adam
Clay Aiken says blood didn't truly pour forth from his ears when he heard runner-up Adam Lambert sing "Ring of Fire" — and hey, he's sorry for his "colorful choice of words."

The former Idol contestant writes in a blog on his Web site dated Friday that "I obviously meant it as a colorful statement to imply that I did not enjoy what I heard." He also says he didn't mean it as "a 'slam' on Adam as a person."

He had blasted Lambert's take on the classic Johnny Cash tune as "contrived," "awful" and "slightly frightening." Aiken says he hopes Lambert can forgive him — but adds Lambert probably doesn't care about what he said.

Amy Winehouse Hospitalized, Nixes Homecoming Show

In what is likely a surprise to no one, Amy Winehouse has canceled plans to perform in London next week in what would have been her first U.K. appearance of the year.

The concert, scheduled to take place May 31, was one of many gigs planned to celebrate the 50th anniversary of her label, Island Records. It was due to be the final show of the weeklong celebration.

No reason was given for the cancellation, though yesterday Britain's Press Association reported that Winehouse was taken to the hospital with chest pains. While her hospitalization came in the wake of a fainting spell, the singer's management claimed she was simply dehydrated and released shortly thereafter.

It's the second time this month the singer's rep has blamed a fainting spell for a doctor's visit. It's also the second time this month that the Grammy winner has backed out of a performance.

Man In Ape Costume Tries To Steal Banana Displays

Police continue a fruitless search for a man wearing an ape costume who has attempted to steal foam banana displays from inside local gas stations. Capt. Steve Klein said Thursday someone donning an ape costume entered two gas stations Wednesday trying to steal the displays and police have received several calls about the suspect hanging around town.

Wind Turbine Noise Suspected Of Killing 400 Goats

Late-night noise from spinning wind turbines on an outlying island of Taiwan may have killed 400 goats over the past three years by depriving them of sleep, an agricultural inspection official said on Thursday.

After the eight turbines were installed in the notoriously windy Penghu archipelago in the Taiwan Strait, a neighbouring farmer reported that his goats had started dying. Council of Agriculture inspection official Lu Ming-tseng said.

"If noise at night can keep people awake, then it could also keep the goats awake, and when the wind kicks up it makes a louder noise," Lu said.

Agricultural authorities would make tests to rule out any other causes of death, Lu said, adding that if the giant power-generating turbines proved to be at fault, Taiwan Power had promised to compensate the farmer.

Horror Story Printed On Toilet Paper In Japan

In a country where ghosts are traditionally believed to hide in the loo, a Japanese company is advertising a new literary experience — a horror story printed on toilet paper.

Each roll carries several copies of a new nine-chapter novella written by Koji Suzuki, the Japanese author of the horror story "Ring," which has been made into movies in both Japan and Hollywood.

"Drop," set in a public restroom, takes up about three feet (90 centimeters) of a roll and can be read in just a few minutes, according to the manufacturer, Hayashi Paper.

The company promotes the toilet paper, which will sell for 210 yen ($2.20) a roll, as "a horror experience in the toilet."

Toilets in Japan were traditionally tucked away in a dark corner of the house due to religious beliefs. Parents would tease children that a hairy hand might pull them down into the dark pool below.

Man Saves Dog By Sucking Snake Venom From His Nose

A man said he saved his dog's life after sucking venom from a rattlesnake bite out of the animal's nose. Bobby Jenkins said he began feeling ill after getting his dog, Tank, to a veterinarian. He went to the hospital and received a dose of antivenin.

Meanwhile, Jenkins said his dog's head swelled up to three times its normal size. Tank had been bitten after running under some equipment on the family ranch. The dog also received antivenin and both Jenkins and his dog have recovered.

Annoyed Man Pushes Would-Be Suicide Off Bridge

A Chinese man was pushed off a bridge by an angry passer-by after his threat to commit suicide held up traffic for five hours, Chinese media reported on Saturday.

Retired soldier Lian Jiansheng, 66, broke through a police cordon and reached out to shake the hand of would-be jumper Chen Fuchao before shoving him off the bridge.

"I pushed him off because jumpers like Chen are very selfish. Their action violates a lot of public interests," Lai was quoted as saying by the China Daily newspaper. "They do not really dare to kill themselves. Instead, they just want to raise the relevant government authorities' attention to their appeals."

Chen, 2 million yuan ($293,200) in debt because of a failed building project, fell 8 metres (yards) onto a partially inflated emergency air cushion and was hospitalized with wrist and back injuries. Lai was detained by police.

Groom Drinks Too Much At Wedding And Dies

A Taiwanese groom died on his wedding day after having too much wine and beer to drink, police and local media said Monday.

The man, 35, an insurance company worker surnamed Wu passed out at home after drinking too much Saturday at a high-end restaurant in Taipei among more than 100 wedding guests, the Liberty Times reported.

Wu was hospitalized after his face turned black, the paper said. A hospital spokeswoman said he died despite treatment.

Court Frees Cross-Dressing Flashing "Nuns"

Seventeen British men stood trial dressed in nun's habits on the Greek island of Crete on Monday for flashing their bottoms in public, but walked free after no one showed up to testify their behavior was offensive. Police said they had arrested the 17 men, aged between 18 and 65, early on Sunday at the popular resort of Malia and a prosecutor charged them with exposing themselves in public and offending religious symbols.

"They were dressed like nuns, carrying crosses, but wearing thongs under their skirts and showing people their bottoms and the rest," said a police official who declined to be named.

Apprehended in the early hours of Sunday, the men were taken into custody and appeared in court on Monday in the same clothes they were wearing at the time of their arrest.

But the court in the town of Iraklio ruled them innocent after no witness appeared to testify against them, the police official said.

BARKIN' OUT LOUD

by Pat "Two Dogs" Snow

on pay per view, it's gonna be open season for normal cable or satellite subscribers.

This is a featherweight bout, but I'm tellin' ya right now, feathers is the last thing you're gonna see anywhere near this deal.

Faber had not lost a fight in, count 'em, three years, plus after gaining the featherweight title, he successfully defended it four times in a row. On his fifth defense he was up against, you guessed it, Mike Brown.

Both these guys look like pit bulls on steroids and fight like Dobermans with gunpowder blown up their nostrils (this is known to make junkyard dogs insane while prowling from dusk to dawn).

Last November Brown dropped Faber late in round one. This sounds like an easy street but it weren't no such thing. In almost three minutes there was blood all over the place, and more flying fists, elbows, knees, and other muscled body parts than you can count. It wasn't just a battle in one round, they brought a war.

This comin' fight promises to be exactly the same kinda brutal hits, so's if you got anybody near you that's squeamish, either send 'em to momma's, or head to your best bud's garage with plenty of iced ones.

By the way, boxing used to be known to gentlemen as the fine sport of pugilism. That's puge (like huge with a p) ul (like your trying to down a lunger), and ism. Cage fighting does have some rules, does have some protection, but this isn't ever gonna be confused with anything gentlemanly or nice. Its raw, it's tough, it's hard, fast, and bloody. It's what I light a cigar over. Woof.

Ok, here 'tis Wednesday, you've just picked up this paper, and I'll tell you right now you know more about some results than I do.

I turn this column in on Monday afternoons, so all the action from then 'til now I have no idea about. What I get to do is grab general feel for what's happening, then try to forecast some games. All things considered, instead of a general feel I should get a general anesthesia.

The sense from most of the sports minded folk out there was that the hockey Conference Finals were going to be wicked tough, and the basketball Conference Finals were not gonna be such a challenge. Fact is, most thought the Lakers were gonna easily put the Nuggets away, and Cleveland would make stardust out of Orlando.

Much of the time in hockey, and I'm obviously talking pro's here, you really can't get a feel for the game by the score because most are low scoring. A 3-2 game might appear to be a close contest by the reality is it easily cudda been over early in the first period.

In the basketball world, you have a game ending up with a two or three point margin and you just had a contest.

For the NHL Conference Finals, the Chicago Blackhawks were taking on the Detroit Red Wings for the West, and the Carolina Hurricanes were strapping it up with the Pittsburgh Penguins for the East. Considering how well the first two rounds of the playoffs went, all the touts were claiming these were gonna be some of the best Conference round finals we'd had in years.

Patoohy.

For Pittsburgh's last series against Washington, it was a thriller, and Carolina's last series against New Jersey was a killer. This series has been mostly boring with the occasional spike of drama. The Penguins sealed off their net from the 'Canes pucks by using Gorilla glue, and I mean, they just aren't letting pucks through.

The Detroit v Chicago series has all the excitement of watching ants work. The Red Wings have been methodical, controlling, thought out game plans, and relentlessly playing to the system. The Blackhawks have the much younger team, like a 21 year old Captain, and they should have a great future in front of them (unlike some teams whose future is behind them), but for this series you can tell that youth hit a wall.

It seems farfetched to believe when coaches say the players have to keep going to higher and higher personal levels of play as they advance through the playoffs, but it's very true. Solid steel, bullet in the kill zone true.

The system they're playing in isn't going to change, so the players HAVE to keep deepening their experience with vision, insight, power, and stamina.

There are two clubs out there, one in hockey and one in basketball, that both rely on and play to their systems. The Detroit Red Wings and the Los Angeles Lakers (using Jackson's triangle offense). Look at the success both have had. Yes, you have to have players who can mentally grasp the system then learn to play within it, but you can't deny that these have been the two most successful systems out there for at least a couple of decades.

You can argue that every club out there has a system, ok, yeah, but over the last two decades you can't argue that these two clubs have the highest winning percentages. They're not secrets by any stretch. Each team knows what's comin' their direction they just have to figure out how to stop it.

Remember the Cowboys of the 90's? Everyone out there knew what Aikman, Irvin, and Smith were gonna bring, they just had to find a way to stop 'em. By the way, not many did. And when Jimmy Johnson left as head coach the system

You're sittin' there thinkin', man, it's the middle of the week, I've had a cement truck load of the hottest sports action this year, and I don't know if my system can take any more. You've got to get ready for the NHL Stanley Cup, and the NBA Finals. And the way all these post season games have gone, you're systems gonna need to be ram charged with a drink that has a punch like Mike Tyson's.

If you're gonna feel that way now, you don't need to be readin' any more of THIS column, 'cause it'll put you right on over the edge.

Thas right, we be fixin' to ratchet the pressure on up to meter blowin' levels.

Before we cover all the FANTastic double HH (hockey and hoops), let's just go ahead and crank our nervous systems on up to boilin' point. Hell, we gonna have to slow down just to get up for the Finals.

You want some action. You want double barreled, double ought buck action. You want a two fistad slug fest. You want top o' the line kickin'. You got it comin'.

On Sunday June 7 you got some of the best mixed martial arts action you're gonna see this year, if not for this decade.

You got's them cage fightin' folk puttin' two blocks of C4 in the ring with Mike Brown vs Urijah Faber at WEC 41 on VERSUS.

This means a MAJOR fight is NOT taking place started changing, the coaches who knew how to teach it were leaving, and things ain't been right since.

Does that mean all else is gloom and doom and nobody's gonna have any fun? Why, heck no. Take these NBA Conference Finals, I mean, woof, these are some of the best doggone games I've seen in years.

Who'd a thunk that either the Nuggets or Magic were gonna stick with the Lakers or Cavaliers? Not the high paid touts, that's for sure. Both these series have gone down to the wire, and it's been either the last mistake or last shot that's won it.

Have the Lakers totally solved Denver? Not on your life support system.

Do I think Denver's made two critical errors late that have cost 'em? Yeah. In game one that toss in that looked like a soft lob on a tennis court that LA intercepted and scored on, that was dumb. And in game three, 'Melo's late foul was dumb. If Denver can keep their heads late, they can run these courts.

I'll tell you what, though, I think Kobe gets away with a lot more than any other player out there. Considering I'm a Mav's fan first, than a general basketball fan second, I'm lookin' at it from an unbiased eye, and Kobe gets away with junk. He's also a whiner. The man can play, no doubt, but he needs to be called like everyone else, and he should stop a bunch of his complaining.

Do I think the Nuggets can still take the series? Yeah, I do. Even if they don't, it's gonna be a blast watching it play out.

What about the Magic and Cav's? Yeah, what about it. How about enough up's and down's to make the loop de loop roller coaster at Six Flags seem tame. LeBron's basket with no time left was a spine tingle all the way, that's for sure. But what Orlando seems to be bringing out more than any other team did this year, is that Cleveland now seems like the Bulls early years with Jordan when he wasn't surrounded by a great support team. LeBron doesn't have the support players that Kobe enjoys in LA. If Cleveland's gonna stay in this series, the bulk of their offense will have to fall on his shoulders. If that's true, whether they play LA or Denver, he's gonna be a worn out puppy.

Both these games are some of the most exciting tension building games I've seen in years. To have two Conference Finals games go down to the wire each time, man, it doesn't get any better'n this.

Ok, don't get your shorts all knotted up, I'm gettin' to the Rangers.

One of the more positive things I've found about them this early in the year is how one player's slump is going to be responded to by the team.

Chris Davis, our illustrious 1B with one year up in the bigs, is going through a batting slump, kinda sorta. Out of 147 at bats, he's had 30 hits and 10 home runs. He's hitting around .200 right now. Most of his hits were earlier in the season. This is what you'd call a prolonged slump.

However, except for the Rangers nose diving at the Detroit Tigers, they've been winning games. I still say Washington's got these guys playing fundamentals and defense far better than they've played before.

A better reason may be the youth of this team.

Of the catchers, infielders, and outfielders, you've got 12 players. Two are rookies, one 1 year experience, one 2 years, three 3 years, one 4 year, a 7, a 9, a 13, and a 20. That's eight of twelve have four years or less time at the bigs.

What's this mean? Well, maybe they're just young enough to not pay any attention to all the years of losing this organization's had and just go out there and play ball.

That's the good news. The bad news: this bullpen won't hold up for the whole season. But, its doggone good ball to watch right now, it's fun, great time to be out, and if you watch these games from the angle that we're settin' our sights on next year so we can see how these guys come along, like Kinsler has, then it's a great time to be at the ball park. Get'cha peanuts and cold 'un's now.

Two Dogs:

How come Rangers 3B Young made it back so fast from the leg injury? Isn't that risky?

Sheldon

Mesquite

Sheldon:

It was called a second degree right ankle sprain, and he only lost one game. They didn't change their diagnoses or evaluation, so in my mind that's one of the fastest returns for a second degree ankle sprain that I know of. The risk is that he rolls the sucker before it's healed and injures it more. It's so early in the season I'd probably have him treat it a few days and then run him back out there.

TD

Two Dogs:

What do you think of King Jones's mega viewing screens at his scalpatorium?

Becky

Pleasant Grove

Becky:

I'm sorta torn on this subject. Like, what's the point of building a stadium that the elevated seats are so high up there that they need to have huge screens to "get" the action on the field? If the upper tiers end up watching the screens instead of the players on the field, wouldn't that eventually convince them to stay at home and watch? If you got a HD TV, a grill, and a fridge, why drive in a traffic jam, pay parking and game ticket prices, buy expensive concession food you can cook better, and pay more for beer? On the other hand, who wouldn't want to see the Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders on a 25,000 square foot HD screen? Woof.

TD

Two Dogs:

Do you think Vick will get back in the NFL and who'd take a chance on him?

Scarp

Denton

Scarp:

NFL Commissioner Goodell has not made public his thoughts on the matter, and for right now that's the pivot point on how soon he'd possibly get back in. The far extremes are penalties ranging from time served in prison to a lifetime suspension, although far more likely is a several game suspension of some kind. Goodell wants to see through Vicks actions that he demonstrates genuine remorse, so the commish doesn't even have to make a decision right away, which could cost Vick another season out of play. From the teams perspectives, he's 29, already missed two seasons of ball, which for an NFL quarterback that's a tremendous amount of time to be away from play, let alone training and practice facilities, all that. With the advent of the "wildcat" offense, a team might be willing to use him as a backup for that role, but a backup is all that he probably has to look forward to. The Raiders might give him a shot, Buffalo got TO so maybe they'd take a run with it, and Singletary and the 49er's might try it. For me, a multiple offender has run through his chances, but this is Vicks first, so maybe he'll get lucky.

TD

Two Dogs:

Is linebacker Greg Ellis going to be with the Cowboys this season? If they cut him, don't they lose an All Pro opposite DeMarcus Ware, which would allow teams to put two or more on DW? Has Spencer improved that much?

Kato

Arlington

Kato:

In the real world where there's smoke there's fire. In the world of sports, where there's smoke, it's usually just a smoke screen. Wade Phillips is a great defensive coach and knows the 3-4 probably better'n anybody, so he wouldn't back this if he couldn't do the job without him. Will it happen? Who knows? Would the 'Boys do it? On a blink.

Guy Builds Batman Forever

Batmobile Replica In His Garage

Now that Christopher Nolan and Christian Bale have shown us how Batman movies are supposed to be, it's hard to watch the previous 4 films without cringing. And that's why I'm a bit confused as to why sculptor Bob Causey has put so much time and effort into creating a drivable replica of the Batmobile seen in Batman Forever, arguably where the original series of films first took a turn for the worse. Now I'm not knocking his craftsmanship or attention to detail, since this replica has a full working interior and a retractable hard top, but given the choice, I'd definitely go with the homebrew Tumbler instead.

H-D Presents Women Riders Month

A record 1,225 women took part in rider training programs in the first weekend of May, the month Harley-Davidson has designated Women Riders Month.

The Harley-Davidson Rider's Edge New Rider

Course reported a 59% increase in female participants compared to the same weekend last year.

The Motor Company also marked Women Riders Month with two events on May 1, which was designated as International Female Ride Day by Vicki Gray of Motoress.com. Karen Davidson, great-granddaughter of Harley-Davidson co-founder William A. Davidson, joined nearly 100 female motorcycle enthusiasts at an International Female Ride Day party in New York City. Meanwhile in Milwaukee, country singer Krista Marie led nearly 300 women in a ride from Miller Park to the Harley-Davidson Museum.

Harley-Davidson is also running several programs to encourage women to ride:

*Dealerships across the country are hosting women-only "Garage Party" events to provide women with information about motorcycling;

*The women's section of the Company's website, <http://www.harley-davidson.com/womenriders>, features stories from women about why they ride;

*Dealerships are distributing brochures aimed for potential new female riders; and

*Harley-Davidson is providing "Share Your Spark" mentoring kits for women to help others start riding motorcycles.

California Barn Find: 50 Vintage Cars, All Up For Sale!

A cache of over 50 vintage cars, mostly British, have gone up for sale from a mysterious southern California collector who's decided to liquidate. Abandon hope all ye who enter here.

We were initially quite leery about post this here for fear of bankrupting readers, but it's too good not to. After years of collecting and planning to restore his cars, this patron of Project Car Hell-age has decided he'd amassed a pile of cars so hellish, so challenging he'd never be able to get to them all, so he's now entertaining offers through the good folks at Bring A Trailer. This collection represents a lifetime of hoarding, and since it's all in Southern California in Nipomo, there's probably a whole lot of pristine and rare sheet metal here.

Forget Plasma and LCDs: Why TVs Of The Future Will Have OLED Screens Just 3mm Thick

It is the thinnest TV screen created - about the same width as a coin at its narrowest point - and Sony believes it could signal a home technology revolution. The simple beauty of its slim appearance has wowed the world's techno-geeks, given the evidence of early reactions to images on gadget websites.

The new generation of Organic Light-Emitting Diode (OLED) TVs also boasts technological advances which mean the image is far superior to LCD and plasma screens.

OLED TVs have a contrast rating of 1,000,000 to 1, which produces amazingly sharp images. This is about ten times sharper than most LCD screens.

The first OLED TV to reach consumers was Sony's 11-inch, $5,500 Bravia XEL, which went on sale earlier this year measuring 3mm at its thinnest point.

Sony recently unveiled a new Walkman music and video player using an OLED screen to take on Apple's iPod, while new large-screen TVs, priced at $7,500 a time, could be in shops before Christmas.

Apple is also rumoured to be planning to include an OLED screen in the next generation of iPod and iPhone devices, which could be unveiled within days.

The OLED TV uses new display technology based on organic materials which emit light naturally, once an electric charge is passed through them, rather than being back-lit as in LCD and plasma screens.

The reduced need to back-light the screen means the sets are both much thinner and use up to 40 per cent less energy.

Study Ball and Chain

The Study Ball gadget is a prison-style ball and chain that you can program to keep track of how much time you spend studying. Once you've selected the desired duration, you chain the ball to your ankle and the manacle won't come off until the scheduled study time is up.

A red LED indicator displays the "Study Time Left" and keeps you informed as to how much longer you've got to keep studying. The ball and chain are made of highly durable steel and weighs a total of 9.5 kg / 20.95 pounds, which makes it difficult to move while wearing it.

Quite often, students who are having problems concentrating tend to get up every ten minutes to watch TV, talk on the phone, take something out of the fridge, and a long list of other distractions. Were they to dedicate all this wasted time to studying, they would optimize their performance and have more free time available. Study Ball helps you study more and more efficiently.

For security reasons, Study Ball may not be programmed for more than 4 straight hours of study time. We recommend that minors use Study Ball only under adult supervision. The gadget has a safety key that allows you to open the manacle at any time and interrupt the scheduled study time.

Porn Star Riley Steele Cast in Box Office Release "Piranha 3-D"

Riley Steele™, an exclusive contract star for adult film studio Digital Playground, is cast in "Piranha 3-D", a 3-D remake of the 1978 cult, horror classic. Scheduled for a March 2010 release, "Piranha 3-D" is produced by the Weinstein Company owned Dimension Films and directed by one of the new kings of horror, Alexandre Aja ("Mirrors" and "The Hills Have Eyes" remake). Riley Steele landed the role of Crystal, one of the leading parts with substantial scenes, and will act alongside an all-star cast featuring Oscar nominated actress Elisabeth Shue ("Leaving Las Vegas", "Hollow Man"), Oscar winner Richard Dreyfuss ("Jaws", "The Goodbye Girl"), Jerry O'Connell ("Jerry Maguire"), Ving Rhames ("Mission: Impossible I-III", "Saw II-IV"), and Kelly Brook ("The Italian Job"). "It's crystal clear that Riley Steele adds yet another dimension to 'Piranha 3-D,'" says producer Mark Canton. "Her natural beauty will light up the screen as she frolics with the hordes of spring break partygoers in our very contemporary, scary 3-D movie."

Bruce Sparks: Adult Cinema Loses Another Legend

Veteran cinematographer Bruce G. Sparks, who shot for such diverse directors as Dino DeLaurentis and Richard Fleischer in Hollywood, and Joe Sarno and Carter Stevens in XXX, has died, reportedly by his own hand, though exact details of the death are not known. Sparks had been retired for several years, his last screen credit having been for the 1980 documentary, The Creative Adventures of Isamu Noguchi.

FEELING DIRTY

All About Porn: Releases, News and Stars!

Sparks began his Hollywood career in 1966, working camera mainly with famed adult director Joe Sarno on such creations as The Love Merchant, Skin Deep in Love, The Bed and How To Make It (a play on Richard Lester's then popular mainstream title The Knack and How To Get It, starring Rita Tushingham) and Anything For Money.

Sparks worked as Sarno's cinematographer from 1966 through the end of the decade, lensing such adult-oriented features as All the Sins of Sodom, Wall of Flesh, and several Swedish productions, including The Indelicate Balance and the Inga series, starring Marie Liljedal.

However, when Sparks began to do hardcore features with Stevens, he (like so many who work "both sides of the hill") adopted a pseudonym, Prudence Prevails, for his XXX work. Sparks and Stevens shared camera credit for such well-known adult classics as Lickity-Split, Highway Hookers, Rollerbabies, Teenage Twins, Double Your Pleasure and The Love Couch.

Mary Carey Pokes Fun at VH1 in 'Celebrity Pornhab With Dr. Screw'

Mary Carey has returned to porn after a three-year hiatus, exploiting her exposure on VH1's "Celebrity Rehab" and "Sober House" in Red Light District's Celebrity Pornhab With Dr. Screw.

Arriving Tuesday, June 2, the movie trashes the exploitative tropes of reality TV as it pokes fun at the antics of drug-addled Hollywood celebrities and the boob-tube therapy of addiction specialist Dr. Drew Pinsky.

"There are so many spoof movies, but not often do you see a parody starring the person who was really on the show," Carey told AVN. "When I did 'Celebrity Rehab,' I decided I was going to put a hold on my adult career. Then I did ['Celebrity Rehab' spin-off] 'Sober House,' and after that, I realized that I really missed doing movies. Porn is where I started. If it wasn't for me being the porn girl who ran for governor, I never would have gotten on those VH1 shows."

Known for its blockbuster success with the Paris Hilton sex tape 1 Night in Paris, Red Light District approached Carey with the idea for the 'Celebrity Rehab' spoof. The studio hopes to launch an ongoing line of parodies featuring the actress, including a sequel to Dr. Screw.

In the X-rated rehab, Mary is not a patient; as Nurse

Carey, she plays a role not unlike Dr. Drew's real-life rehab associate Shelly Sprague. AVN Hall of Fame actor Mike Horner co-stars as Dr. Screw.

YouTube Yanks Thousands of Porn Videos

YouTube has removed thousands of pornographic videos from its servers following a coordinated attack which succeeded in uploading a catalogue of inappropriate clips to the video-sharing site.

4Chan, a bulletin board for Japanese manga content, has been blamed for the attack, which used the names of celebrities such as Hannah Montana to lure unsuspecting YouTube users to the porn videos.

YouTube's owner, Google, said thousands of videos have been deleted, but some may remain accessible for some time while the company removes the content and associated thumbnail images.

One person said to have uploaded the videos to YouTube claimed to have been part of a coordinated attack by 4Chan users.

"I did it because YouTube keeps deleting music. It was part of a 4Chan raid," said YouTube user 'Flonty', speaking to the BBC. Google said any YouTube account set up to attack the video-sharing site will be disabled.

However, tracking the content being uploading is a mammoth task. YouTube said in a blog on Wednesday that 20 hours of video is now being uploaded every minute. This has grown from 15 hours per minute in January 2009, and six hours per minute two years ago.

Sex Theme Park Is G-String Too Far For China

It was a G-string too far for China's prudish authorities, which swung the wrecking balls yesterday to demolish the country's first sex theme park before it could even open.

The developers had hoped that Love Land would break an ancient taboo and encourage people to talk openly about sex as well as improve their performance in bed. However, their apparent act of altruism was dismissed as "an evil influence on society" and torn down before visitors could inspect the park's statues of giant genitals or participate in sex technique workshops.

Among the first displays to be destroyed was a rotating signboard with the park's name, straddled by a giant pair of women's legs topped by a red thong.

Lu Xiaoqing, the park's manager, bemoaned the lack of sexual openness in China, where just three decades ago it was deemed provocative for a woman to have long hair or to wear a skirt. "Sex is a taboo subject in China but people really need to have more access to information about it," he said. "We are building the park for the good of the public. I have found that the majority of people support my idea."

He clearly failed to win over propaganda officials in the southwestern city of Chongqing, who inspected the site after photographs appeared on the internet. "The investigation determined the park's content was vulgar and that it was neither healthy nor educational. It had an evil influence on society and had to be torn down immediately," an official said.

He Shizhong, head of the municipal publicity department, said that the company had "ignored its social responsibility and was interested only in profiting from sensationalism".

One man told Global Times, an English-language newspaper in China: "I'm glad the park was demolished because the displays were really rough and had no artistic quality." Another wrote on a popular chat forum: "Too many people can't break through traditional barriers so it might be too early to build such a park."

Some would-be visitors were displeased. "The park was above board so why was it pulled down? How can a country get powerful if it doesn't open its mind?"

Bathing Beauty Tradition Reborn

By: Ms. Misha Moré

The Bathing Beauties of a bygone era resurfaced Saturday to parade their style and reinstate a timeless beach tradition.

The Pageant of Pulchritude of eighty years ago that became the Miss America pageant, drew a crowd three times the size of Galveston's population.

Fans of vintage pinup lined the seawall, supporting the resurgence of the retro Galveston Island Beach Revue that was coordinated by Islander By Choice, a retail apparel business.

Twenty eight women and two men competed in the vintage round while twelve women competed in a modern bikini contest.

"It is focusing on Galveston's history," said Adrienne Culpepper, a partner in Islander By Choice. "A few years ago, we saw a pamphlet with the bathing beauties, and we thought, 'why don't we do this?'"

While contestants mingled and quintessential surf-pop, with beach-party music, antiqued photos showed the lineup of the pageant girls from the '20s and '30s, as onlookers traveled nationwide to attend the festivities.

Many of those in attendance recognized their relatives' smiling faces in the vintage photos.

Second in both the vintage and modern categories, Dana Blue said she remembered looking at her aunt in similar Galveston lineups.

"Retro trends are coming back in fashion, and it's a return to old values," Dana Blue, who made her own leopard print two-piece, said. "Leaving a little to the imagination is just as beautiful."

It's classy — it's fun. It's less about looking at women's outfits and more an excuse to look at their costumes and say 'nice gams.'

Vintage Winners:

First — Melozi Scott

First runner up — Dana Blue

Second runner up — Secilia Garrett-King

Modern Winners:

First — Chandler Rainey

First runner up — Dana Blue

Second runner up — Traci Cowart

SEX IN THE NEWZ

When We're Broke, We Buy Lube

Further confirmation that sex-related industries continue to do well during a recession: Sales of personal lubricants increased 32 percent this quarter, up to $41.2 million. "When the economy goes down, sex goes up," according to a spokesman for Johnson & Johnson, the company behind K-Y Yours & Mine his-and-hers lubricants. The "sexual-enhancement" product category is growing even faster, with sales up 74 percent this quarter. So, it seems the recession is good for something, namely taking away everyone's money so they can't afford to see a movie in the theater, but they have enough to pick up a few ounces of lube. But while you're at the store, don't forget a pack of condoms. An increase in unemployment rates increases fertility, according to the National Bureau of Economic Research, and we see a mini-baby boom as a result.

Teen Who Auctioned Her Virginity May Lose Half To Taxes

Tax authorities in Germany are poised to claim 50 percent of the money that a teenage student earned for 'auctioning' her virginity because they claim it was 'tantamount to prostitution'.

Romanian-born Alina Percea, who is a student in Germany, was paid $14,000 in cash for a weekend of sex with the Italian businessman after she auctioned her virginity online.

But tax officials in Berlin regard the 18-year-old's act as 'nothing more than prostitution'. Prostitution is legal in Germany - but it is heavily taxed.

The Romanian-born computer studies student's visa allows her to work in Germany for 90 days - even as a prostitute.

One tax expert said: 'Even if she was taxed as a purveyor of erotic moments, or whatever she wants to call what she did, she would have to pay tax on it. Prostitution is merely a means for the bureaucrats to pin her down for a claim. She would have been better off keeping quiet about this strange transaction.'

It also emerged that, because Alina earned so much in such a short time, she may even be liable for a hefty VAT bill too.

VAT in Germany works out to 19 per cent, meaning the sale of her virginity could land her with just over $6,400 in the end.

Geeks Best In Bed, Gym-Goers Most Selfish

Nationwide research of over 2000 people in relationships has found that those who work in the tech sector are less selfish in bed and more open to using sex toys, whilst the same research also found that those who work in the fitness industry or were regular gym-goers were more likely to be selfish and think of their needs above their partner's.

An anonymous study of 2,084 British men and women in relationships conducted by the UK's leading independent PS3 videogame and console site has found a correlation between geeks and their openness to pleasing a partner in bed, with four in five agreeing that sex should be more about 'the partner', as opposed to people who worked in the sports and fitness industry where just 41% agreed.

56% of respondents were male, 44% female.

When asked by www.PS3PriceCompare.co.uk "Do you regularly use sex toys with your partner?" the respondents that worked in the tech sector; in jobs within IT such as computer analysts, web design and development were most likely to.

Eight out of ten tech workers said that sex toys played an important part in their sexual relationships. The fitness-minded participants were the least likely to use them, with just three in ten claiming to use them regularly.

People working within manual jobs were second, with 66% confirming they regularly used sex toys to enhance their lovemaking.

When asked "How regularly do you and your partner have sex?" 53% of office workers claimed to have sex 3 or more times a week, compared to business owners at the other end of the scale, where just 21% said they had sex 3 or more times a week. Sports and fitness workers were second with 47%, followed by techies with 38% at third and manual workers at fourth with 36%.

The question "During sex, do you consider your partner's sexual needs above your own?" prompted the following responses, with over half of fitness workers and business owners proving to be the most selfish in bed:

Virgins Wanted For Sex

It is either a grotesque publicity stunt or a genuine attempt to explore young people's attitudes to sex and sexuality.

Posters appearing around Sydney are offering $20,000 for virgins to appear in a feature-length documentary. But the fine print reveals the would-be stars - a man and a woman - must be prepared to be filmed as they auction their virginity online. In return, they get the cash, 90 per cent of the winning bid and, one presumes, a good night out.

A Sydney student, Ben Smith, 22, has applied for a role but may not proceed to audition.

He was less interested in the money than the exploration of attitudes to sex. "[The auction] really shouldn't be as confronting as it is and it's a sad reflection on society that it is such a touchy subject," he said.

He said he is waiting for the right woman to yield his virginity. He has had several relationships of more than a year but sex never became an issue. "Maybe it's because women are less pushy about it."

Mr Sisely, who is funding the film, said he had been contacted by about 100 people, most in their early 20s. The oldest was 26.

The two stars would be filmed visiting psychologists and taking a lie-detector test to ensure their purity but the deed would not be screened. "It's not a porno," Mr Sisely said.

Cynthia Nixon Announces Engagement to Girlfriend at Gay-Rights Rally

Cynthia Nixon is making it official with her girlfriend of nearly six years, education activist Christine Marinori.

The Sex and the City star, 43, showed off her diamond engagement ring at the Love, Peace and Marriage Equality rally for gay rights in New York City Sunday. The event supported New York governor David Paterson's proposed bill legalizing same-sex marriage.

Nixon has said she would wed "if it became legal in New York. 'I don't really want to get married to get married pretend. I think we'd like to do it in a real, actual, legal way that the state would recognize.'"

The actress is mom to Samantha, 12, and Charles, 6, from her prior relationship with English professor Danny Mozes. Nixon is set to star in the Sex and the City sequel, out next spring.

From 'Nothing' to Civil Unions to Gay Marriage

On March 26, New Hampshire's House defeated a bill legalizing gay marriage by one vote, then reconsidered and passed it, to the surprise of many.

Two months and many rounds of intensive lobbying later, New Hampshire is poised to become the sixth state to let same-sex couples marry.

Gov. John Lynch said Thursday he will sign the bill provided that legislators add language to better protect churches and their employees against lawsuits if their beliefs preclude them from marrying gays.

Lynch's suggested amendment is expected to move through the House and Senate quickly, perhaps as soon as Wednesday.

"I wouldn't say it's a done deal, but my gut tells me it has a better than 50-50 chance of making it to the governor's desk," said Kevin Smith, executive director of gay marriage opponent Cornerstone Policy Research.

Christian College, Student Porn Actor Still at Odds

John Gechter will not be returning anytime soon to the conservative Christian college that suspended him in April after discovering he worked in gay pornography in order to pay his tuition. In addition, if Grove City College decides to readmit him after a one-year "degree of separation" between him and the school, it will be only on the condition that he renounces porn.

Gechter, who lacks only two courses to complete a bachelor's degree in molecular biology, began the appeal process through college channels before deciding to withdraw voluntarily. He will be eligible to reapply for the fall semester in 2010.

A gay adult performer for two years before his part-time employment was discovered, Gechter said he plans to complete his contractual obligation with the gay adult studio for which currently he works. He performs under the name "Vincent DeSalvo" for RandyBlue.com.

When the contract is complete "within the next several months," Gechter said he will withdraw from performing in porn in hopes of convincing Grove City College to readmit him and grant him a degree.

Gechter, 22, said he took the job in gay porn because it paid better by itself than the four other jobs he worked simultaneously paid together. Because Grove City College does not accept federal financial aid, he was required to fund his annual tuition bill of $18,514 personally.

StickyPen.com Announces Cowboy Fiction Contest Winner

"Real Cowboys in Cowboy Country," a short story in which a city slicker from Chicago gets more than he bargained for from a passel of ranch hands in Denver, was named the winner of StickyPen.com's first gay erotic fiction contest.

The author, StickyPen user bardnc, will receive an autographed copy of To the Last Man, the companion coffee-table book to Raging Stallion Studios' gay western epic of the same title. Other authors who entered their work in the contest will receive 30 free minutes in the StickyPen video-on-demand theater operated by parent company AEBN.

"The decision was difficult," admitted Clarke, StickyPen's administrator. "All of the submissions were great reads, but someone had to be the winner and I think bardnc's story deserves top honors."

"This was our first contest, and it was a complete success," Clarke added. "I want to thank everyone who wrote, read or voted on the contest stories. Without them, it wouldn't have been possible."

To read all the entries in the contest, visit StickyPen.com.

Clinton to Announce Benefits for Partners of Gay U.S. Diplomats

Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton will soon announce that the partners of gay U.S. diplomats are eligible for many benefits currently denied them and allowed to spouses of heterosexual diplomats, according to lawmakers and others advocating the change.

The Bush administration had resisted efforts to treat same-sex partners the same as spouses. Thus those partners were denied a wide array of benefits, such as paid travel to and from overseas posts, shipments of household effects, visas and diplomatic passports, emergency travel to visit ill or injured partners, and evacuation in case of a security emergency or medical necessity.

Those benefits will be extended to all unmarried domestic partners -- both same-sex and heterosexual -- under the policy shift to be announced by Clinton in the coming days, according to a draft memo prepared for Clinton's signature.
